American Lung Association hosts 6th annual Fight for Air Climb event
 Climb the stairs of Frost Bank Tower for a good cause

The American Lung Association in Texas—Austin and more than 1,000 people—including participants, volunteers and several teams of firefighters—will participate in The Fight for Air Climb on May 30.

For more than 100 years, the American Lung Association has been at the forefront in the Fight for Air. All proceeds from the Fight for Air Climb directly fund lung disease research, advocacy, and education; including COPD/asthma management, smoking cessation programs, and advocacy for stronger clean air standards.

Participants will walk or race to the top of the Frost Bank Tower in downtown Austin to raise money for the mission of the American Lung Association in Texas. Teams of friends, families and coworkers join Austin firefighters in full gear, police officers and the military to climb over 31 floors and 660 stairs to the top of the Frost Tower. Fitness Challenge invites fitness enthusiasts to compete in the extreme climb division. Additionally, the Lung Association will honor four local individuals who have helped to raise awareness on issues of lung health through their positive examples and community outreach.

Check-in for the climb begins promptly at 8 a.m. on race day, Saturday, May 30, 2015. The first climber will ascend the monument at 9 a.m. An award ceremony will immediately follow the event.

The Frost Bank Tower is located at 401 Congress Ave., in Austin, TX 78701.

Pre-registration for the event is simple at fightforairclimb.org. The registration fee is $25 in advance and all participants are encouraged to raise $100 by event day. For more information, please visit www.lungtexas.org.
